

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

HISTORY, even that of a township in the back-woods of Maine, should have for its object the improvement of the reader.

His entertainment, too, is certainly desirable, but not at the expense of that higher purpose. Of the success of this little volume in either direction, it is for others to judge.

It was not proposed to confine the following pages exclusively to the township first named Porterfield, but to introduce various subjects relating more particularly to the Pine-tree State, of which this township forms a part. The writer, until recently, had no intention of calling for the services of the printer. He did intend, after obtaining the materials thought desirable, to arrange them in manuscript for himself and such friends as might have the curiosity to look over them in that form.

The individuals now living, who in childhood were familiar with the faces of our first settlers, are rapidly passing away, and soon but a meager tradition of these pioneers will remain.

If, by these pages, some memorials of them worthy of record, shall be saved from oblivion, the labor of the writer will not be wholly in vain.

PORTERFIELD.

THE territory which now embraces the town of Porter (except about 120 acres of Cutler's grant) and the western portion of Brownfield, was conveyed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, by deed to certain persons as follows: "Know all men by these presents that we whose names are undersigned and seals affixed, appointed by the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, a committee with full power to sell and convey the unappropriated lands of the said Commonwealth lying within the counties of York, Cumberland, and Lincoln, for and in consideration of the sum of five hundred and sixty-four pounds, lawful money, paid to us for the use of the said Commonwealth, by Jeremiah Hill, of Biddeford, in the county of York, Esq., and his associates hereafter named, pursuant to the contract made with them some years since, the receipt whereof we do hereby acknowledge, have given, granted, bargained, sold, and conveyed, and by these presents do, in behalf of the said Commonwealth, give, grant, bargain, sell, and convey to the said Jeremiah Hill and his associates, viz.: Aaron Porter, of said Biddeford, physician, Thomas Cutts and Nathaniel Scammon, both of Pepperellboro', in said county of York, esquires, Seth Storer, of said Pepperellboro', merchant, and James Coffin, of said Pepperellboro', yeoman, Caleb Emery, of Sanford, in said county of York, esquire, William Emery, of said Sanford, and Nathaniel Merrill, of Fryeburg, in said county of York, yeomen, a township, being a tract of land lying in the county of York aforesaid, now called 'Porterfield,' [so-called for the above-named Dr. Porter] as the same was surveyed by Samuel Titcomb in the month of November, A.D. 1789, containing about eighteen thousand and six hundred acres, including ponds, etc., lying between the rivers Saco and Great Ossipee, in the county of York, bounded as follows, viz. : beginning at a pitch pine tree, standing on the line of New Hampshire and on the north side of said Ossipee river, thence running on said line north eight degrees east, nine miles one hundred and twenty rods to a beech tree standing at the west corner of Brownfield, thence bounded by said Brownfield, north seventy-eight degrees east, five hundred and fifty-two rods to a pitch pine tree, thence south twenty-eight degrees east, seven hundred and sixty rods to a hemlock tree standing near the south-west side of a small stream called Shepard's river, being the northerly corner of Timothy Cutler's land, thence bounded by said Cutler's land, south sixty-two degrees west, nine hundred and fifty rods, thence south twenty-eight degrees east, two miles, thence north sixty-two degrees east, nine hundred and fifty rods to said Brownfield line, thence running on said Brownfield line south twenty-eight degrees east, seventy rods to a pitch pine tree, thence south eighteen degrees west, nine hundred and eighty rods to a poplar tree, thence south seven degrees east, seven hundred rods to a maple tree standing by the north side of said Ossipee river, thence running up and by said Ossipee river until it intersects first-mentioned bounds, excepting and reserving four lots of three hundred and twenty acres each for public uses, viz. : one for the first settled minister, one for the use of the ministry, one for the use of schools, and one for the future appropriation of the General Court, the said lots to average in goodness and situation with the other lands in the said township, and also excepting and reserving for the disposition of government one hundred acres of said land for each of the following settlers who settled thereon before the first day of January A.D. 1784, laid out or to be laid out, so as best to include such settlers' improvements and be least injurious to the adjoining lands, viz.: John Libby, Meshach Libby, Stephen Libby, and James Rankins. [The deed to these four settlers and this to the proprietors were signed by the same committee. The settlers' deed was dated June 16, 1792, and is now in the possession of M. S. Moulton.] To have and to hold the afore-granted premises to the said Jeremiah and his associates as tenants in common, in the following proportions, viz.: to the said Jeremiah Hill two fifteenth parts, to the said Aaron Porter six fifteenth parts, to the said Thomas Cutts one fifteenth part, to the said Nathaniel Scammon one fifteenth part, to the said Seth Storer one fifteenth part, to the said James Coffin one fifteenth part, to the said Caleb Emery one fifteenth part, to the said William Emery one fifteenth part, to the said Nathaniel Merrill one fifteenth part. To them and their several heirs and assigns respectively, in the proportions aforesaid. And we the said Committee, in behalf of the Commonwealth aforesaid, do covenant and agree with the said Jeremiah Hill and his said associates, that the said Commonwealth shall warrant and defend the afore-granted premises, saving the exceptions and reservations aforesaid, to them, their heirs and assigns forever, in the proportions aforesaid, against the lawful claims and demands of all persons.

In testimony whereof the said committee have hereunto set their hands and seals this twenty-fourth day of September, in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three.

TITLE TO MAINE, HOW ACQUIRED BY MASSACHUSETTS.

A full and impartial history of the means by which Massachusetts acquired title to these lands, would be read with much interest by our townsmen, but the limits of this work will only allow a brief statement of the most important incidents connected therewith. I give the facts as stated by historians of ability to separate the chaff from the wheat, and of integrity to state the truth, and nothing but the truth.

In 1620, James I, king of England, granted to the Council of Plymouth, a company in the county of Devon, England, all the territory, from ocean to ocean, lying between the fortieth and forty-eighth degrees of north latitude, to be known by the name of New England in America. This grant included, of course, the whole territory within the limits of Maine. In 1622 the Plymouth Company granted to Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mason the territory lying between the Merrimac and Kennebec rivers. In 1629 Gorges and Mason divided their possessions, Gorges taking all east of the Piscataqua, and Mason, all west. In 1635 the Plymouth Company divided their grant among the proprietors, and that portion lying between the Piscataqua and Kennebec rivers was awarded to Gorges, who, amid his embarrassments occasioned by restless Frenchmen and encroaching Puritans, sought from king Charles I, and received in 1639, a new charter confirming his former claims to the territory between the Piscataqua and Kennebec rivers, and extending one hundred and twenty miles inland. This territory was then for the first time called "The Province of Maine." Prior to this time, Gorges called his grant New Somersetshire.

As early as 1658 Massachusetts assumed jurisdiction over a portion of this territory, and, at length, over the whole State. She did not merely assume jurisdiction, but was prepared to use a more effective weapon than the pen. In 1663 she sent her mandate to the people of Maine, requiring them to give obedience to her laws. Soon after, she ordered here a military force of cavalry and infantry. This force proceeded to York, where a court established by Gorges was in session, drove the judge and his assistants from the court-house, imprisoned the commander of the local militia, and threatened the judge and all who favored the Gorges' interest. Ministers of the gospel were seized and imprisoned for preaching doctrines distasteful to the ruling powers of Massachusetts. Other kindred acts need not here be stated.

Some plausible reason was to be found, or rather invented, for such high-handed aggressions. The Massachusetts charter established its northern boundary "three miles north of the Merrimac." These words plainly mean that its northern boundary was three miles beyond the river at its mouth. This point was well known to the grantors and grantees, but the region three miles beyond the head-waters of the Merrimac was a terra incognita—unknown alike to both the king and council, and to the grantees. In fact, all, before this time, were agreed in the interpretation here stated; but after Maine had been seized, in order to justify the wrong, a new interpretation must be devised. They found that the river, about thirty miles from its mouth, turns from its general direction, and making nearly a right angle, stretches to the north. So, tracing up the river to find its source among the hills and mountains, and following the lessening stream until vision keen can no longer discern a tiny ripple or sign of moisture, they thread the wilderness three weary miles further to the north, and there the goal of their search is attained. Thence, a course due east is said to have been taken until the shore of the Atlantic was reached. The northern line of their grant is established, and a territory embracing nearly all of new Hampshire, and a large and valuable portion of Maine is, de facto and de jure, theirs. So much shrewdness can hardly be excelled at the present day by our experts in sharp practices. Acquiescence on the part of the Maine colonists could hardly have been expected. An appeal was at once made to the crown. The king in council decided in 1677 that the north line of the Massachusetts colony was three miles from the north bank of the Merrimac at its mouth, and that the province of Maine, both as to soil and government, was the rightful property of the Gorges' heirs.

Thus baffled, Massachusetts was by no means disposed to yield, even to the king. Forthwith, her agent hastened to England, found a grandson of Ferdinando Gorges, paid him the vast sum of twelve hundred and fifty pounds for his interest in his grandfather's American possessions (a sum but little more than double that paid to Massachusetts by Hill and his associates for the plantation of Porterfield), and so, whatever the value of his inheritance, willing or unwilling to make sale of it, he received his mess of pottage. The agent having returned, possession under the spurious title was duly proclaimed. On the accession to the throne of William and Mary, who were known to be not unfriendly to the Massachusetts' colonists, a royal charter was applied for, and in 1691 granted. The colonies of Plymouth, Massachusetts, Maine, Sagadahoc, and Acadia were, by this charter, consolidated under one title, "The Province of Massachusetts Bay." Former charters were utterly ignored, the doctrine that might makes right, prevailed, and Maine, not Gorges' grant alone, became an appendage to Massachusetts.

When Massachusetts attempted to subjugate Maine by military force, she claimed no title to any part of it from Gorges or his heirs. On the contrary, she imprisoned officers who had been appointed by Gorges, and threatened all who favored his interest. How, then, could the contract with the grandson, made more than twenty years after her military raid into Maine, in the least degree justify the wrongs inflicted by her upon our people? It seems, at this late day, that the advantages to be derived from the charter of William and Mary, rather than justification, solely governed her action. If the charter was granted in consequence of the purchase from Gorges' grandson, the twelve hundred and fifty pounds swelled to millions of dollars. Be this as it may, the gain to Massachusetts from the charter, and the consequent loss to Maine, was several millions of dollars.

The following is an extract from the speech of Mr. Blaine, made in the U. S. Senate, session of 1877-78 :

“Mr. Dawes calls Maine the daughter of Massachusetts. Let us for a moment examine her authority to claim such a parentage. She had early and gradually extended her motherly jurisdiction over the northern part of Maine, against the wishes and protest of the inhabitants, especially those east of Saco, who were Episcopalians. It is immaterial whether they ‘came seeking commercial advantage or to worship God,’ so long as we know they did worship him on every returning Sabbath day in the beautiful liturgy of the English church, read in the chapel at Richmond’s Island, in 1635, first by Rev. Richard Gibson, a graduate of Cambridge, England, and after him, by Rev. Robert Jordan, whose baptismal font of bell-metal has been preserved by his descendants to the present time. There the boats flocked from all the region round, ‘like doves to their windows.’ These good men were forbidden by Massachusetts to exercise their ministerial functions, and were imprisoned for so doing. The jurisdiction of Massachusetts was annulled by the king in 1676. Then she sent her agent, John Usher, to England, to negotiate with the grandson of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, who was dead, for the purchase of his right to the soil, which was accomplished, in 1677, for twelve hundred and fifty pounds. Yet the English government denied the right of the purchaser to govern the district, and not until 1691 did the Massachusetts Colony finally throttle the Episcopalians of the territory of what is now Cumberland county, which was settled at the same time as Boston. Then she swallowed Maine and Nova Scotia at one gulp, and her governor fitted out an expedition to take Quebec for an outpost, but the elements were against him. Our District of Maine remained unassimilated in the capacious maw, a century and a quarter, yet I think the so-called mother is entitled to some credit for her saying to us, go in peace, which was her only motherly act. Can the old Bay State claim parentage with propriety when we are as old as herself, and came under her guardianship by our own weakness and the cupidity of the heir of the good Sir Ferdinando Gorges? "

DISCOVERY AND SETTLEMENT.

The first discovery of the coast of Maine, says the Hon. William Willis, was made by the Northmen as early as the year 990. In 1498, 1524, 1525, 1527, and 1556, the coast was visited or seen by various adventurers from Europe. The first attempt at settlement was made as early as 1604 by the French, but was abandoned the next year. Other unsuccessful attempts followed.

The time of the first permanent settlement is not with certainty known. The same historian states that Gorges and Mason in 1623 planted a colony at the mouth of the Piscataqua, in the present town of Kittery, which was the first occupation of the mainland in Maine. Ex-governor Chamberlain, in his centennial address, considers 1607 and 1608 as the time, and the region of the Sagadahoc, as the place, when and where the permanent settlement of Maine began.

In 1630 the Piscataqua settlement, it is said, contained a population of 200, Agamenticus (York) 150, Saco 175, and all the territory between the Piscataqua and Penobscot, 1500 white people. The first court established in Maine was at Saco in 1636, and there was a general court at the same place in 1640. In 1641 Gorges organized a capital at Agamenticus, naming it Georgianna, the first chartered city in America.

Of the distinguished men of our country in the early period of its history, Maine furnished, as natives or settlers upon her soil, her full quota. Among these were Sir William Phipps, the first governor of Massachusetts, born at Woolwich, Maine, in 1651; James Sullivan, another governor of Massachusetts, distinguished as a jurist as well as a statesman, born at Berwick in 1744; Gen. John Sullivan, of revolutionary fame, and member of the first Continental Congress; Gen. Henry Knox, a favorite of Washington, and his first Secretary of War; Gen. Henry Dearborn, Jefferson's first Secretary of War; Rufus King, a statesman and diplomatist; Gen. Jedediah, and Commodore Edward Preble; Commodore Tucker; Gen. Peleg Wadsworth; and George Thatcher, the judge and statesman.

SITUATION AND AREA.

The State lies between $42^{\circ} 57'$ and $47^{\circ} 30'$ north latitude, and between $5^{\circ} 45'$ and $10^{\circ} 10'$ east longitude from Washington. Its area is 32,000 square miles, or 20,480,000 acres. Its greatest length from the mouth of the Piscataqua to its most northern point is 320 miles. Its greatest width from the Atlantic to Canada line is 160 miles; and a straight line from the mouth of the Piscataqua to Quoddy Head is 250 miles.

CLIMATE.

The annual average temperature at Portland for 32 years (from 1825 to 1857) was $43^{\circ} 23'$. The highest point attained was $100^{\circ} 5'$; the lowest, Jan 24, 1857, 25° below zero. At Northfield, Vt., the mercury fell to 40° below; at Augusta, 42° below; at Dartmouth College, 30° below; and at Bangor 44° below.

*The first court within the limits of Maine was established by Gorges at Saco in 1636. He also established a General Court there in 1640. A Court of Common Pleas in 1659, and a Supreme Court in 1699 were granted by Massachusetts to the county.

Valuation of the United States in 1870, $30,068,518,507.

As this total of $224,822,918 does not include property exempt by law from taxation, and as the assessors of no town knowingly render to the State for taxation a valuation excessively high, the aggregate wealth of the State was many millions more than these figures indicate.

According to Behm and Wagner's statistics, the total population of the earth is 1,439,145,300, Europe 312,398,500, Asia 831,000,000, Africa 205,219,500, Australasia and Polynesia 4,411,300, and America 86,116,000.

The plantation of Porterfield, as bought by Hill and his associates, is sufficiently described in the committee's deed to them; but the plantation as incorporated in 1802 included, in addition, Cutler's grant of 3,800 acres. After the conveyance to Hill and his associate proprietors, John Wingate was appointed by them surveyor of the tract; and when his surveys and plan of the same had been completed (each lot being marked on the plan with the name of its owner), they formally agreed that this plan "should govern them in all respects, and should be used in evidence in all cases respecting any part of the premises." Three well executed copies of this plan are owned in town, one by the town.

In that part of Porterfield embraced within the limits of Porter as incorporated, the first settlement was made by Meshach Libby, from Pittsfield, N. H., in 1781. In a short time he was followed by his father, John Libby, and his brother Stephen, also from Pittsfield. Michael Floyd came next. These were the only settlers until 1787, when Benjamin Bickford, Benjamin Bickford, jr., and Samuel Bickford, from Rochester, N. H., and Benjamin Ellenwood, from Groton, Mass., were added to their number. Mr. Ellenwood resided here about ten years, and then left with his family. In about 1791 David Allord, Job Allord, Joseph Clark, and Moses Drown, from Rochester, became settlers. May 22, 1792, David Moulton, from Hampton, N. H., purchased a farm in the plantation, but did not move in until April 27, 1793. The settlement of Benjamin Bickford, jr., David and Job Allord, Clark, and Drown, continued but a few years.

By the terms of the deed to Hill and others, four lots were reserved to those settling thereon before the first day of January, 1784; to Meshach Libby the lot sold by him to David Moulton, and now owned by Moses S. Moulton; to John Libby a lot now owned by William T. Taylor, who, with his son Simeon, lived on it until the death of the father about 1804; to Stephen Libby the lot, the northern part of which is now owned by Meshach Mason and sons and by George W. Ridlon; and to James Rankins the lot for many years (from 1793 to 1817) owned and occupied by Daniel Knowles, and by the late Daniel Towle from 1817 to 1872.

The committee's deed is all the evidence we have that Rankins ever had a settlement in the plantation. Stephen Libby and Francis Mathews state in their affidavits, recorded among the town records, book 3, page 110, that Michael Floyd first settled upon this lot, and that it was granted to him as a settler prior to Jan. 1, 1784; and in the deed to Daniel Knowles this lot is described as "the one first inhabited by Michael Floyd and sold by him to James Rankins." If Rankins had been an actual settler here, the fact would have been well known, not only to Libby and Mathews, but to all the early settlers; but he was never, to my knowledge, spoken of by them as one of their number, neither is his name found on the plantation records. Hence I conclude that Rankins' settlement was a mere paper one, and that Michael Floyd was the fourth settler. After a few years' residence here, Floyd went to Parsonsfield, where he died. His widow died in Porter.

Meshach Libby, May 22, 1792, sold his lot to David Moulton, "for sixty pounds, lawful money," and bought that of his brother Stephen. Meshach remained on the lot purchased of Stephen until his death. Stephen, after the sale of his farm to his brother, bought a tract of land adjoining, and east of, David Moulton's, embracing the present homesteads of Truworthy C. Libby, Hanson Libby, Henry M. Libby, John Weeks, a lot of about forty acres owned by Samuel Ridlon, jr., a part of John C. Mason's farm, and about thirty acres of the farm of Moses S. Moulton, and made his home thereon many years.

THEIR RESIDENCE BEFORE 1800. .

MESHACH LIBBY, who was born about 1750, and died in March, 1829, married, first, Deborah Ely, and second, Hannah Cram. The children of Meshach and Deborah were, Sarah, who was born in 1771, and married in June, 1793, Gideon Mason; Mary, who married William Hill; Meshach, jr.; Elsy, who married Edward Hill; Elizabeth, who died in childhood; and Eunice, who married Jacob Hurd. Elizabeth and Eunice only were born after Mr. Libby's settlement here. Elizabeth was the first child of European descent born within the limits of Porter, and was buried upon the border of her father's garden, a few rods westerly of the workshop of Moses S. Moulton. Widow Lamson, the mother of Benjamin Ellenwood's wife, is said to have been the first white person dying in town. Her burial place is on the farm of Simeon Day. Elizabeth Libby was born between 1781 and 1786. None of the children are supposed to be now living. Their father was buried in the family burying-ground, north-westerly from the house of Meshach Mason and sons, and south from the house of George W. Ridlon. Peregrine White, son of Mrs. Susanna White, who came over in the Mayflower, was born the last of November, 1620. He was said to be the first child of European extraction born in New England.

JOHN LIBBY and wife died, it is said, about twenty years after their settlement in the plantation, and were buried a few rods westerly from their house. There is no record evidence of the time of their birth or death. Their children were Meshach, Enoch, John, jr., Simeon, Jonathan, Stephen, Kezia, who married —— Sargent, and Mary, who married Daniel Knowles.

STEPHEN LIBBY first married Mary Knowles. She was born March 1, 1768, and died in October, 1816. Their children were: 1, James, b. June 5, 1784, m. Phebe Benson; 2, Daniel, b. April 3, 1786, m. Mary Rundlett; 3, Josiah, b. March 23, 1788, d. June 8, 1788; 4, Mary, b. July 30, 1789, m. Josiah Weeks; 5, Jemima, b. August 22, 1791, m. Joshua Weeks, and d. May 12, 1879; 6, Stephen, jr., b. SETTLERS OF A LATER PERIOD THAN 1792.

The following-named persons had a residence in the town, as early as 1803, and when there is evidence of an earlier settlement, the words "as early as" are to be supplied by the reader, before the year annexed.

Josiah Bridges, who lived at Porter Village, near the spring called "The Bridges Spring," Benjamin Bridges, probably a brother of Josiah, who lived and died on the farm occupied by the late William Floyd (the cultivation of this farm was his chief employment, but a portion of his time was devoted to turning out, in a rudely constructed lathe, bowls and mortars, then an essential part of household furniture), Josiah Bridges, jr., James Bridges, Jonathan Blazo, 1802, Samuel Brooks, Hezekiah Bickford, who was the second captain of the military company first organized in the plantation, Jonathan Cook, Abraham Cook, Nathaniel Cook, John and William French, from Farmington, N. H., 1796, Jacob French, 1802, John Fox, 1801, Edward Fox, Elijah Fox, Henry Floyd, 1794, John Hayes, an emigrant from Ireland, where he had been employed as a weaver, David Hodsdon, Daniel Knowles, 1793, Isaac Knowles, Simeon and Jonathan Libby, John Libby, jr., who, it was said, had so retentive a memory that, having heard a lengthy sermon, he could repeat the whole of it, imitating very accurately both the tones and gestures of the speaker (aside from memory he was not endowed with superior mental powers), Meshach Libby, jr.,

Hanson and Tobias Libby, and Isaac Libby their father, Gideon Mason, 1794, John Mason, 1795, Francis Mathews, 1802, Charles Nutter, 1797, Joseph Pottle, 1793, who was the first captain of the plantation company, David Pottle, 1793, Joseph Pearl, 1793, Thomas Randall, the father of the poet, Samuel Richards, Samuel Richards, 2d, and John Thompson.

The following-named persons settled later, but before the incorporation of the town: Job Bailey in 1806, James Coffin in 1806, who was the first justice of the peace in the town, Samuel Hodsdon, 1805, William Stanley, 1805, Joseph and Elisha Stanley, 1806, John Stacy, April 8, 1804, Ebenezer Taylor, 1806, Henry Tibbetts, 1805, and Richard Young, 1805.

Jonathan Blazo, Elijah Fox, John Hayes, Jonathan Libby, Meshach Libby, jr., Joseph Pottle, Thomas Randall, Samuel Richards, 2d, Job Bailey, William Stanley, and Richard Young, were not permanent settlers. Daniel and Isaac Knowles and Simeon Libby removed to the State of New York in 1817.

PLANTATION RECORDS.

The plantation meetings were held at the dwelling houses of Wm. Broad, Daniel Brooks, John Wentworth, Abraham Cook and Josiah Bridges, jr. The first meeting was held July 12, 1802, at the house of Wm. Broad. At this meeting, Nathaniel Merrill, an original proprietor, was chosen moderator, and it was voted "to raise twelve pounds for the plantation's use, to give the collector, John Merrill, two shillings per pound for collecting, to raise $200.00 in labor for repairing roads, and not to have any gates or bars across the county road after this season, and to keep gates or bars across the other roads till next March meeting."

At a meeting held Aug. 23, 1802, a road previously laid out "from the north side of Libby's Settler's lot" (the lot originally granted to Stephen, but then owned by Meshach Libby) "to the county road in Pottle's mill yard" (at Porter village), was accepted. This was the first highway built by taxation, in the plantation, the county road having been built by the proprietors, in accordance with a contract referred to in their deed. At the same meeting, the road laid out from Porter village, through the western part of the town, to Freedom line, was accepted; also "a road from Jonathan Blazo's" (where Geo. E. Stacy now lives), "to the county road"; and at a meeting held Sept. 7 of the same year, a continuation of the first-named road over the hill, to the house of Stephen Libby (now T. C. Libby) was accepted. At a meeting April 4, 1803, it was voted "that the assessors shall have 75 cents per day for their services, and the treasurer one dollar for his services the past year, that good gates may be kept across the roads, except the county road, and that the annual plantation meetings shall be held on the first Monday of April." At a meeting held June 13, 1803, the plantation was divided into five school districts, three of which were within the present limits of Porter, and two within the limits of Brownfield.

The following is the list of names as recorded in the three districts:

FIRST DISTRICT.	SECOND DISTRICT.	THIRD DISTRICT.
Thomas Randall,	David Moulton,	Isaac Knowles,
Samuel Richards,	Simeon Libby,	Samuel Brooks,
Sam'l Richards, 2d,	Stephen Libby,	Henry Floyd,
Joseph Pottle,	Edward Fox,	Hezekiah Bickford,
John French,	Meshach Libby, jr.,	Joseph Pearl,
Wm. French,	John Mason,	John Hayes,
Hanson Libby,	Jonathan Libby,	Jonathan Cook,

Tobias Libby,	Elijah Fox,	Nathaniel Cook,
Daniel Knowles,	John Fox,	James Bridges,
Francis Mathews,	Gideon Mason.	Josiah Bridges, jr.,
Meshach Libby,		David Hodsdon,
Jacob French.		Abraham Cook,
		John Thompson.

At this time there were no settlers in the eastern part of the plantation, south of the present limits of Brownfield. If we suppose a line drawn from the Ossipee river due north, to the south line of Brownfield, and about one mile east of our Town House, all the permanent settlers then resided west of it. The first school district embraced the families in the southern part, the second, those in the middle, and the third, the families in the northern part. At the previous annual meeting, April 4th, it was voted to raise \$200.00 for the support of schools. Thus early did our ancestors appreciate the value of our public schools. At the presidential election held at the dwelling house of John Wentworth (the only presidential election held under its plantation organization), Nov. 5, 1804, nineteen candidates for electors were voted for, viz.: two for electors at large (James Sullivan, then of Boston, and Elbridge Gerry of Cambridge); thirteen for that number of congressional districts in Massachusetts, and four for the Maine districts, to wit: Cumberland county forming one, York county, one, Kennebec, Hancock and Washington, one, and Lincoln, one. From the first Maine district (Cumberland county), Charles Turner of Turner was the candidate; from the second district, John Woodman of Buxton; from the third, Thomas Fillebrown of Hallowell; and from the fourth, John Farley of Newcastle. Each candidate received thirty-seven votes, except Farley, who had thirty-six. These nineteen candidates having been chosen, voted for Jefferson for President and George Clinton for vice-President. In the record of a meeting, April 1, 1805, this contract is stated: "The collector, William Boynton, agreed to collect the taxes for $19\frac{1}{2}$ cents upon every three dollars and 33 cents, i.e., for $19\frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound, New England currency. The change from pounds, shillings and pence, to dollars, cents and mills, was to many an undesirable innovation. The proposed Metric System of weights and measures is destined to meet a more formidable opposition. At a meeting, Aug. 5, 1805, it was voted "to have the plantation of Porterfield incorporated" [as a town], "and to have it called Denmark." The town of Denmark was not incorporated until 1807.

At the last annual plantation meeting, held April 7, 1806, James Sullivan had forty-two votes for governor, and Caleb Strong, one. On the same day it was "voted to allow Hanson Libby $1.50 for his services as treasurer the past year, and Samuel Wentworth 82 cents for his services as plantation clerk."

INCIDENTS OF THE TIMES.

In one respect, the period of our town's settlement was fortunate. The question of supremacy as between England and France had been settled by Gen. Wolfe, on the plains of Abraham, in 1759. The Indians under Paugus, in 1725, had been driven by Capt. Lovell and his valiant band, from their hunting grounds on the Saco and Ossipee, and the power of the more distant tribes, that had devastated so many New England settlements, was utterly broken. But if martial prowess was not then needed, other manly virtues were, and in these our early settlers were not wanting. It is true, they were generally poor, but they were hardy, energetic, self-reliant and honest. On their arrival, the first labor for them was a combat with the giants of the forest. Many of them were experts in such a contest.

“Deep echoing groaned the thickets brown,
Then rustling, crackling, crashing, thundered down.”

His acre per day was not then, as now, a feat for the axeman to boast of. A clearing made, shelter for himself and family must next engage his energies. Although the forests afforded abundant timber, no friendly sawmill was at hand to cut it into boards. These had to be transported on a drag made for the purpose, from a distant town, over a road, of which the construction and repairs consisted mostly in spotting the trees for the guidance of the teamster. At length industry and perseverance conquer. A dwelling deemed comfortable, if not elegant, is ready for the family. The walls of the house, first occupied by my father, were made of nicely hewn pine timber, locked together at the corners. The house was of sufficient size for three rooms below. Above stairs were the dormitories for the bairns and occasional lodgers, but “the spare-bed” occupied a more desirable situation below. The fire-place and lower part of the chimney were built of carefully selected stone, and the continuation sky-ward was constructed of sticks and clay mortar. This house was occupied as a dwelling until 1809, and afterward as a workshop, until about 1830, when it was torn down. At first a rude hovel was all that could be afforded for the shelter of gentle “Brindle” and her associates.

Clearing up the forest and building rude dwellings were not all that was required of the pioneer. His increasing family must be fed, clothed and educated to the extent of his means, and all was to be done, not by the use of ready capital, but by his own untiring industry. The soil is hard and rugged, his implements of husbandry are rude, his flocks are assailed and diminished by the prowling wolf and bear, and his harvested grain must be sent to a distant town (Saco), to prepare it for the skillful hands of the ever-busy housewife. If he is so fortunate as to have a surplus of farm products, they are to be transported to a distant market, over an almost impassable road intercepted by streams unbridged, over rocky hills, and through muddy swamps, and when the tedious journey is accomplished, he finds but a pittance remaining for the wants of his family. His children for years have no teacher but the parent, and when at length a change for the better comes, one school, supported by contribution, suffices for an extended settlement. By and by, "in revolving years," the first step in the true path is taken, and the full sum of two hundred dollars is raised by taxation for the support of the district school.

Among the recreations of that early period, hunting was a favorite pastime. The black bear and deer were quite plenty, but the noble moose and the cowardly wolf were only occasional visitors. Owing to his fondness for the settlers' flocks, the bear was selected by all the best hunters as a fit subject for their finest skill. Meshach Libby, being on a tour of observation, came in sight of one honestly taking his dinner in the boughs of an oak, while an agile deer was quietly helping herself to the fallen acorns that chanced to escape the jaws of her clumsy companion above. Mr. Libby looked kindly on the game under the tree, but to the destroyer of his gentle flocks no mercy was due. Down tumbles bruin, not in the embraces of death, as Mr. Libby had fondly hoped and expected, but little hurt and undaunted by the noise of gunpowder or the presence of man, and ready for the tug of war,—war aggressive to the fullest extent of his powers. Mr. Libby at once sought a large tree near by, hoping that its branches might afford some means of escape, but with bruin in such hot pursuit climbing was out of the question. After many turns about the tree, and having the advantage of "the inside track," Mr. Libby had a little time to take breath and, perhaps, to reflect upon the situation. However this may have been, he did recollect that his gun, like Chamberlain's in the fight with Paugus, was self-priming. Acting on this suggestion, but at the same time briskly keeping up his flight around the tree, he pours the powder from the ready horn, drops the ball in its place, strikes the breech with his hand, turns suddenly, and his pursuer is stretched on the race course in the agonies of death.

As an incident of the times, it may not be out of place, in this connection, to mention another encounter of like kind. A hunter from Parsonsfield, by the name of Kezar, occasionally visited the old hunting grounds of the Pequawkets, in pursuit of his favorite game, the surly monarch of these forests. Ordinarily, the black bear is a cowardly brute, and rarely exhibits any traits of bravery, but let the family circle be suddenly invaded, the latent ferocity of the mother is at once aroused to the highest pitch of frenzy. Kezar, in one of his excursions near the base of Rattlesnake mountain, unexpectedly found himself confronted by this ferocious animal, and almost in her ugly embraces, before he was aware of her presence. No time was allowed him for retreat or preparation. Unfortunately it was lunch time, and his gun could not at once be grasped. She, erect as himself and with distended jaws, rushed upon him. In a moment a daring thought occurred to him and was instantly acted upon. His hunting knife was thrust through the open jaws into her throat. Human prowess, guided by intelligence, triumphed, but Mr. Kezar's lacerated and bleeding arm showed how dearly bought was the victory.

Generally, no personal danger was apprehended by the settler from any and all of the hairy denizens of the forest, but not so as to the reptile tribe. The rattlesnake had made a lodgment here, and the life of every person was in jeopardy who might incautiously set foot upon, or otherwise molest, one. Many of these reptiles were killed in all parts of the plantation, but a large number seemed to seek their winter quarters in the ledges of the hill east of the upper Spectacle pond and in the ledges of the hill known as Rattlesnake mountain. At a certain time in the fall and spring they were much more plenty in the vicinity of these hills than elsewhere. In the spring of 1820 Oliver Stacy and a neighbor killed eleven in about one hour on Rattlesnake mountain.

Although so numerous and their bite generally fatal, no one within the limits of the town was ever materially injured by them. Ivory Merifield, perhaps a half century ago, was bitten upon the finger, but he, doubtless, saved his life by immediate and long continued suction of the wound. About forty years since, a large one crawled into the entry of a school-house in the western part of the town. While the only door to the school-room was thus guarded, the teacher by chance discovered her unwelcome visitor, and having helped one of her scholars out of a window, a neighbor at once came to the rescue. This species of reptiles seems now to be extinct in this town, none having been seen, to my knowledge, for many years.

THE COLD FRIDAY.

Friday, Jan. 19, 1810, has been justly called "The Cold Friday." A citizen of this county wrote in his diary of that date: "The Cold Friday. Last evening the weather was mild, but in the night the wind arose and blew terribly." Houses and barns were unroofed or completely demolished. The thermometer at Portland fell to 14° below zero, and in the country towns still lower. We who have never been exposed to such an atmosphere, driven onward at a velocity of fifty or sixty miles an hour, can have no conception of its life destroying power.

A lady, who distinctly recollects that eventful day, informed me that her father, in repairing some damage done to his barn doors, had his ears and face badly frozen, although he was exposed to the cold but a few minutes at a time. To young children, and to the aged and infirm, exposure for much length of time was fatal. One family, having their house unroofed, attempted to reach a neighbor's living at the distance of about half a mile. A sleigh was obtained by the husband and father, but it was useless, the wind preventing its being of any benefit. The strong man did all that could be done, but a part only of his dear ones survived the death-blasts of that memorable day.

THE DARK DAY.

"May 19, 1780 was a dark day. The darkness began at eleven o'clock A.M. and continued until midnight, thirteen hours. It was so dark at two o'clock that a person could not be known at the distance of two rods. The night was proportionally dark." The above memorandum was made by my father, who was about twenty years of age at the time. A recent writer says: "Our parents and grand-parents told the story of that wonderful day. It never faded from the memory of the witnesses. The darkness extended over all New England. In some places it was impossible to read common print in the open air for several hours together. Birds sang their evening song, disappeared, and became silent; fowls went to roost; cattle returned to the barn-yard, and lamps were lighted in the houses." One writer, in describing the darkness of the night, says that "a sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eyes was equally invisible with the blackest velvet." No satisfactory explanation of this event has ever been given.

THE GREAT SEPTEMBER GALE

extended over New England and a portion of New York and Pennsylvania, having commenced, it is said, in the West Indies, and in its northern course destroyed many vessels before reaching our coast. A large number of buildings in Boston and neighboring towns were unroofed or blown down. In Providence, R. I., five hundred buildings were destroyed and fifty vessels, all that were in the harbor except two, the force of the wind and water wrenching them from their fastenings and driving them, with the accumulating mass of rubbish, far up the streets of the lower part of the city. At Stonington, Ct., the tide was seventeen feet higher than usual. In this vicinity, the damage consisted mostly in unroofing houses and prostrating trees.

One of our early settlers wrote in his journal that his family fled from the house and sought shelter behind some large pine stumps that were near by, and that the forest trees in the vicinity were torn up by the acre. A neighbor of his then lived in his log cabin, but had a new framed house about ready for occupancy. The family, not fully confiding in the stability of the old or new structure, sought also a stump protection. The log cabin withstood the gale, but the new house was demolished. Our oldest citizens think the uprooting of trees was the principal damage done by the gale, in this town. We have no record of any other gale, from the settlement of the country to the present time, that will compare with this in severity, power, and extent. The time of its greatest violence was between the hours of ten and twelve on the twenty-third day of September, 1815.

THE COLD SEASON.

For many years our aged citizens spoke of the summer and fall of 1816 as the cold season. Beyond doubt, at no time since the settlement of the town has the average temperature of the season been so low as in 1816. According to a memorandum made by the late Dea. William Wentworth of Brownfield, "it was cold and windy, with some snow, on the 6th, 7th, and 8th of June, and there was a frost on the 30th of June, 9th of July, and 22d of August." My father's corn, although planted on high land with a northern slope, was wholly destroyed by the frost in August. In the western parts of this state, corn, even partially ripened, was rarely raised by our farmers. In the eastern portions of the state, there were, on June 6th, six inches of snow upon the ground, and no corn, that year, grew there to roasting ears. In some instances rye was not injured by the frost, but the most of the farm crops were either greatly damaged or wholly destroyed by it.

In 1817, although money was scarce, corn was worth from $2.50 to $3.00 per bushel, and it was often difficult to obtain it with ready money at the figures named. Our citizens generally felt the pressure of these truly hard times, but the suffering of the poor, for the want of suitable food, was far greater than in any other year since the settlement of the town. One family of several persons obtained one bushel of corn, in the winter of 1816-17, and this was their sole resource for bread, until a crop of rye was harvested in August following. One of our farmers was accustomed to tell the story, that after the small berries had ripened in 1817, he directed his boys when going to their labor, to work awhile, then pick berries, and continue thus to do until night. In this way, he said, the boys did the work without grumbling. Another family were visited by a traveling preacher who had been accustomed to make his home with them while he remained in the settlement. He arrived after the usual meal time, and requested something to eat. The lady in due time set upon the table some half-grown, fried potatoes.

She did the best she could. No excuses were made by one party or fault found by the other.

UNNATURAL DEATHS.

Since the incorporation of the town, nine persons, Isaac French, George Coolbroth, James Hartford, John W. and George W. Ridlon, Samuel Stanley, Nellie Landon, David L. Ridlon, and Benjamin Downs, have lost their lives by drowning; Benjamin Pearl and Jackson T. Billings, in felling trees; David Coombs, in rolling logs into the Ossipee river; James Coolbroth, by falling from a mill dam; William Bickford, by the accidental discharge of his gun; John Stimpson, by the premature discharge of a cannon; William Brown, by falling from a frame; Samuel Brooks and Relief Libby, by being burned; Oliver Stacy, jr., and John Douglas, by being thrown from their carriages, and, July 8, 1869, Charles William Day, by lightning, the only instance of death from this cause in the town since its settlement. We have had, also, three cases of suicide and one of fratricide, the brothers having been residents and natives of York county. Since the first settlement, no unusually fatal disease has been prevalent in town.

TIMBER LANDS.

Had our fathers known the worth of our forest trees, they would have left in these a legacy far exceeding in value all other property transmitted by them to us. The white pine was everywhere abundant, and by them treated as inexhaustible and of but little account; but even during their lifetime, some trees that had, by chance, escaped the general destruction of their fellows, were bought, as they stood in the forest, by ship builders for fifty dollars each. One pine grew on the farm now owned by Gilman J. Norton, measuring six feet in diameter at the height of three feet from the ground. This tree was cut down and left to decay upon the ground where it fell. Oak, both red and white, of excellent quality, was also abundant, particularly in the southern portion of the plantation.

THE FIRST CHURCH ORGANIZATIONS.

The first church (Congregational), composed of members residing in the northern portion of Porterfield and in the town of Brownfield, was organized in October, 1804. The Rev. Jacob Rice from Henniker, N. H., was installed as pastor at the same time. His salary, as agreed upon, was one bushel of wheat per year from each member of his parish or other citizen who might be able and disposed to contribute to his support. He continued his ministerial labors here until his decease, Feb. 1, 1824, at the age of eighty-three years. For more than fourscore years his health had been unusually good. Upon that Sabbath morning, while preaching in a school-house, the church of the times, he suddenly faltered, and in a few hours passed from his terrestrial to his celestial home. Mr. Rice was a graduate of Harvard college, a good man and acceptable preacher.

A Baptist church was formed in the southern part of the plantation in 1806 or 1807, during the missionary labors of the Rev. Lemuel Rich of Machias. No record of this church has been preserved, but the following named persons were members at the time of its formation or soon after: David Moulton and wife Dorothy, Meshach Libby, Daniel Knowles and wife Mary, Charles Nutter, Simeon Libby and wife Hannah, Mary Libby, wife of Stephen, James Libby, John Libby, Misses Mary, Jemima, and Sally Libby, Tryphene Mason, wife of John, Miss Nancy Elkins, Jemima Fox, wife of Elijah, Deborah Fox, wife of John, Miss Deborah Fox, Olive Fox, wife of Edward, and Miss Abigail Fox. They had no settled minister, but were frequently visited by the pastors of other churches. Among this number were the Revs. Mr. Rich, Mr. Locke of Hollis, and Mr. Kinsman of Limerick. Their meetings were well attended and had a salutary influence upon society.

A Free Will Baptist church was also early formed in this part of the plantation by Elder John Buzzell of Parsonsfield. The following are the names of some of its members at or about the time of its formation: William French and wife Kezia, John French and wife Sally, Jacob French and wife Mary, William Stanley and wife Susan, Bethany, wife of Samuel Hodsdon, Joseph Stanley and wife Eunice, Ruth, wife of John Stacy, Henry Tibbetts and wife Hannah, Misses Lucy and Betsey Brooks, Catharine, wife of Joseph Pearl, and Betsey, wife of John Mason, 2d. This church for many years was without a settled minister, but the members held their meetings upon the recurring Sabbath, and often listened to the fathers of the church, either at their own place of worship, or at North Parsonsfield. Among these were Elders Benjamin Randall, John Buzzell, Aaron Buzzell, and John Colby. The yearly meetings were held in the spacious old meeting-house at North Parsonsfield, when every neighborhood for miles around was well represented. The amount of good accomplished by this body of Christians was not lessened by the want of a gorgeous church or other tinsel gilding of modern times. The Methodist Episcopal Church here was formed at a more recent period.

P O R T E R .

IN February, 1807, "An act to incorporate a part of the Plantation of Porterfield into a town by the name of Porter," passed both branches of the Legislature of Massachusetts, and was duly signed by Gov. Strong, on the twentieth day of that month. By this act the boundaries of the town are thus defined: "Beginning on the north bank of Great Ossipee river, on the line between the State of New Hampshire and the District of Maine, thence northwardly by New Hampshire line one thousand and nine hundred and seventy rods to a stake and stones; thence south eighty-three degrees east one thousand and three hundred rods to a stake and stones on the east line of the Plantation of said Porterfield; thence southwardly by said Porterfield line to Great Ossipee river; thence up in the middle of said river to New Hampshire line, the place begun at." Its southwestern corner is upon an island in the Great Ossipee river, an island unknown to fame, but of sufficient importance to be a portion of four towns, three counties, and two states of "The Great American Republic."

The southern boundary of the new town, the Great Ossipee river, is in $43^{\circ} 43'$ north latitude, its western boundary, 6° east longitude from Washington, and its distance from the Baldwin depot on the P. & O. R. R. is five miles.

TOWN RECORDS.

The first town meeting under the act of incorporation was held March 20, 1807, at the dwelling-house of James Coffin, for the purpose of choosing town officers. At this meeting James Coffin was chosen moderator; Hanson Libby, clerk; David Moulton, James Coffin, and Hezekiah Bickford, selectmen and assessors; John Stacy, treasurer; and William French, constable and collector. The next day a warrant was issued by the selectmen to the constable, requiring him "in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to warn the male inhabitants of said Porter, of twenty-one years of age and upward, having a freehold estate within the Commonwealth of the annual income of three pounds, or any estate to the value of sixty pounds, to meet at James Coffin's old house, on the county road, on the sixth day of April next, at ten o'clock A.M., to give in their votes for governor, lieutenant-governor, and two senators." At this meeting James Sullivan had twenty-three votes and Caleb Strong two, for governor. Levi Lincoln had twenty-one, Andrew Fernald, one, and Edward H. Robbins, one, for lieutenant-governor. For the office of senator, John Woodman had twenty-four votes, Joseph Storer twenty-three, Joseph Leland three, and Andrew Fernald two.

At the second annual town meeting, held in April, 1808, $200 were raised to defray town expenses, $100 for the support of schools, and $500 in labor and materials for repair of highways. At this meeting the town officers for the preceding year presented their accounts for services. The three selectmen charged $38.07, the clerk $1.50, the collector $9.20, the treasurer $2.00; total $50.77. In 1877, the town officers, including the overseer of the town farm, charged for their services $583.20. An article inserted in the warrant for calling a town meeting Feb. 18, 1809, was "To see if the town will vote that all the town charges and all the services done in and for said town, shall be paid in produce or some other article short of the money." The subject was referred to the next annual meeting, but was not then acted upon.

The first requisition for a juror from this town was made in May, 1816. On the 20th of that month William French was drawn to attend the United States court held at Portland. On the same day a vote for separation from Massachusetts was passed, yeas 46, nays none. In September following the vote was again taken, and the result was yeas 37, nays 8. This was strictly a party vote, the federalists being opposed to the measure.

From an examination of the records it appears that the town meetings were held in the house or barn of James Coffin until Nov. 2, 1812, when first a meeting was held at the school house in the first school district; and the meetings continued to be held therein, generally, until Nov. 1, 1824, when the north meeting house became the town house, and was then for the first time occupied as such. At a meeting held Sept. 20, 1819, William Towle was chosen a delegate to the convention held at Portland to draft a state constitution, and on the 6th of December following a vote was taken by the town on its ratification. The vote was thirty-six to ratify "the constitution of the new state of Maine" to one in opposition. April 5, 1824, it was voted to raise $400.00 for the purpose of finishing the north meeting house and to secure to the town the right of holding therein its future town meetings. It was also voted at the same meeting "to give Elder James Sawyer" (then a Free Will Baptist minister) "a call to preach the gospel." A committee of five was raised "to report an agreement how the town should agree with said Sawyer." The committee reported "that the town should give him the use of the lot of land Gideon Mason lives on, and the interest of the ministerial and parsonage lots of land in said town that were sold last summer, with his "giving an acquittance of his right to the land," (320 acres) "he might hold by being the first settled minister in said town." Mr. Sawyer accepted the terms. After the ministerial labors of Mr. Sawyer were finished, the town, by a resolve of the legislature, was authorized to hold in trust the fund arising from the sales of the reserved ministerial and school lands, and required to appropriate yearly its interest for the support of our public schools. In 1827, 1828, 1829, and 1830 $3,000.00 in labor and materials were raised to build the county road from the line of Freedom to that of Hiram. Each man was allowed twelve and one-half cents per hour for himself and the same for a yoke of oxen.

During the last term of President Jackson's administration the last dollar of our national debt was paid, and a surplus remained in the United States treasury. This surplus was distributed by congress among the different states in proportion to population. Maine distributed her share among the different towns in the state in the same manner. Porter received, April 19 and May 1, 1837, $2,174.00. At several town meetings after its reception, the surplus revenue was a theme of much discussion. Various propositions for disposing of it were submitted to our voters. Finally, April 2, 1838, it was voted "to distribute the town's proportion of the surplus revenue as soon as may be." This vote was carried into effect, and each inhabitant received $2.07.

In the warrant to call a town meeting April 7, 1845, is the following article: "34th. To see if the town will instruct the selectmen to grant licenses to retailers of ardent spirits," and at the meeting it was "voted that the selectmen grant licenses to all that may make application to them to sell spirituous liquors the year ensuing." This vote, in connection with what is now known to be the public sentiment of the town, shows a great and beneficial change in the minds of our citizens since 1845. Should the same proposition be now submitted to our voters, not one, I think, would publicly approve of like instructions.

By more recent records it appears that the town raised by taxation, for paying soldiers' bounties during the rebellion, the sum of $29,215.40, and for recruiting, $798.00; total by town taxation, $30,013.40. Under the United States internal revenue act, from Aug. 28, 1862, to Sept. 1, 1869, the taxable citizens of Porter were assessed, in consequence of the war, $2,305.02, making a total war debt of $32,318.42.

VOLUNTEERS.

In proportion to population, few towns have furnished more soldiers to defend our institutions and common country than Porter. Six of her residents had taken part in our long and arduous struggle for independence. The war commenced by the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775, and closed by the treaty of Paris, Sept. 3, 1783.

For the war of 1812 Porter furnished twenty-eight volunteer soldiers, being nearly ten per cent of the whole number of persons then in town. President Madison's proclamation of war was issued (in accordance with a previous act of congress) April 19, 1812, just thirty-seven years after the battle of Lexington, and the war terminated by the treaty of Ghent, Dec. 24, 1814. The battle of New Orleans, however, was fought on the 8th of January following, the intelligence of peace not having then reached Gens. Jackson and Packenham, the American and British commanders.

For the Mexican war, commenced April 24, 1846, and closed Feb. 2, 1848, by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, seven young men enlisted.

To suppress the slave-holders' rebellion, commenced by a rebel attack on Fort Sumter, April 12, 1861, and closed by Lee's surrender to Gen. Grant at Appomattox Court House, April 9, 1865, eighty-one of our resident and native young men volunteered. It is a peculiar incident that the war of the revolution, that of 1812, that with Mexico, and that of 1861 commenced in April. According to the report of our late adjutant general, John L. Hodsdon, Maine furnished during the great rebellion 66,669 soldiers. Of these there died of wounds 2,805; of disease, 4,854; discharged for disability, 12,863; and missing in action, 2,041; total casualties, 22,563.

Historians, other than our own, give due credit for Maine's sacrifices in crushing the slave-holders' rebellion. But what of Maine while an appendage to Massachusetts? What her history during the French and Indian war, that of the revolution, and the war of 1812? Behold, it is all written in the book of the chronicles of Massachusetts,—Maine's history appropriated by Massachusetts! There we shall find that Maine regiments, in fact, were Massachusetts regiments in name; that Massachusetts and Maine won in battle, but Massachusetts alone won in honor. When Washington, in addressing and commending a portion of his troops for their valor in turning the tide of a desperate battle in his favor, said, "God bless the Massachusetts line," he spoke not to men of Massachusetts, but to men of Maine, from our counties of York and Cumberland. A faithful history of what Maine was instrumental in accomplishing for our common country, during those many years of war's desolation, has never been written, neither will it be. Of our history we have been plundered as well as of our lands.

The whole number of men in the United States that enlisted into the Union army was, according to the president's annual message of 1872, 2,688,523. It is stated in Greeley's American Conflict, vol. ii., page 759, that the number enlisted for three months was 191,985; for six months, 19,076; for nine months, 87,558; for one year, 394,959; for two years, 43,113; for three years, 1,950,792; for four years, 1,040; total, 2,688,523, and that, as many of these enlisted two or three times, while thousands deserted, it is probable that not more than 1,500,000 effectively participated in suppressing the rebellion. The same author estimates our loss of life as follows: 56,000 dying on the field of battle, 35,000 dying in hospitals of wounds, and 184,000 dying in hospitals by disease. The number dying after their discharge, by disease contracted in the service, we have no means of ascertaining.

REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICTS.

There is no plantation or town record of any vote for representative to the legislature before our separation from Massachusetts in 1820; although from 1810 to 1819 inclusive we were classed with other towns for the choice of representatives. The classification has been as follows: In 1810 we were classed with Denmark and Lovell; from 1811 to 1814 inclusive, with Denmark, Lovell, and Waterford; in 1815, with Denmark, Lovell, Waterford, and Fryeburg; in 1816 and 1817, with Sumner, Woodstock, Fryeburg, Hiram, and Brownfield; in 1818 and 1819, Oxford County formed one representative district; from 1820 to 1831 inclusive, with Brownfield and Hiram; from 1832 to 1841 inclusive, with Hiram; from 1842 to 1851 inclusive, with Brownfield and Hiram; from 1852 to 1861 inclusive, with Brownfield and Fryeburg; from 1862 to 1871 inclusive, with Brownfield and Fryeburg; and from 1872 to 1881 inclusive, with Brownfield, Fryeburg, and Stow.

MILLS AND BRIDGES.

One saw-mill, at least, and probably two, were built here as early as 1799. One was built at Porter village, another on the same stream not far from the Stanley or Roberts pond, called on the plantation map "Deer pond." The saw-mill of Stephen Libby was built near the site of the mill now owned by John Weeks, and was in operation as early as 1805. The first grist-mill in town, as stated by the late David Colcord, was built in 1793 by Caleb Emery, on the outlet of the Colcord pond, known on the map as "Ellenwood's pond," Mr. Ellenwood having occupied the farm on its western border. This grist-mill and one at Porter village were, doubtless, built about the same time. From the best evidence attainable, the first bridge across the Great Ossipee at Porter village was constructed between 1795 and 1800; the second in 1808; and the present covered bridge there in 1876, costing this town $1,717.24. The first river bridge at Kezar Falls was built by subscription in 1833, and the covered bridge at the same place, in 1869, at a cost to Porter of $1,632.15.

The population of Porterfield in 1800 was 272; of Porter in 1810, 292; in 1820, 486; in 1830, 841; in 1840, 1,133; in 1850, 1,208; in 1860, 1,240; in 1870, 1,105.

The state valuation of the town was in 1820, $27,939; in 1830, $36,311; in 1840, $113,984; in 1850, $165,198; in 1860, $186,204; and in 1870, $275,469.

SOLDIERS EITHER RESIDENTS IN, OR NATIVES OF, PORTER, WHO WERE ENGAGED IN SUPPRESSING THE SLAVE-HOLDERS' REBELLION.

For the materials of this chapter I am indebted to such soldiers as could be consulted, to the friends of other soldiers, and to the various reports of our late Adj. Gen. John L. Hodsdon.

The actual merits of every soldier are not to be estimated solely by the facts herein stated. Some of them have been able to give a full and correct account of the stirring events in which they were actors, others equally meritorious, have failed in imparting information so as to do justice to themselves, or were, as soldiers, by no fault of their own, placed in positions unfavorable to an exhibition of their true character. Death, too, has precluded the rehearsal here, of much that would heighten our regard for the memory of many who went forth from us to do battle for the right.

In the short time¹ allotted me in the preparation of this chapter, I have spared no reasonable pains. Interviews with soldiers have been had, and letters written in all instances where it was supposed that facts of any value might be obtained. My exertions in this direction have been, in many cases, successful; in some, partially so, and in others a total failure. Hence the result as here presented, must, by the want of better information on the part of the writer, be necessarily defective, and to a certain extent, unsatisfactory to the reader as well as to the writer.

Banks Ivory H., Com. K, 23d Me.,

Capt. Moses N. Stanley, was mustered into the U. S. service for nine months, Sept. 29, 1862, and was mustered out of the service and discharged July 15, 1863.

Duroy John B., Com. C, 9th Me.,

Capt. George W. Brown, was mustered into the service Aug. 11, 1862, for three years, was appointed an orderly by Maj. Gardiner, was slightly wounded in the battle of Morris Island, and was discharged July 24, 1865. In 1863, July 10, he was in the battle of Morris Island, S. C., July 11 and 18 in the attacks on Fort Wagner; in 1864, Feb. 20, he was in Gen. Seymour's disastrous defeat at Olustee, Fla., May 20 in the battle at Bermuda Hundred, June 1 at Cold Harbor, June 30 in front of Petersburg, Aug. 16 and 18 at Deep Bottom, Sept. 29 at Chapin's Farm, Oct. 27 at Derby Town Road; and in 1865, Jan. 15, in the assault upon and capture of Fort Fisher by Gen. Terry, a portion of the 9th Me. participating in the attack.

While in front of Petersburg, ten men from each company of his regiment were detailed for a particular service. Mr. Duroy was of the number. Six-tenths of them were slain, owing to their commanding officer's misapprehension of his orders.

Floyd Ira, Com. K, 23d Me.,

Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months, and died.*

Floyd Osgood F., Com. G, 10th Me.,

Sellmer. He was in the battle of Hatcher's Run, in the last Petersburg, and in Gen. Grant's final conflict with Lee at Appomattox Court House. His final discharge was dated June 12, 1865.

Fox David M., Com. D, 5th Me.,

Capt. Edward W. Thompson, was mustered into the service June 24, 1861, for three years. He re-enlisted Jan. 4, 1864, in Com. B, 1st Regt. Infantry, Veteran Vols., Capt. Charles H. Small, for three years, and was mustered out July 2, 1865. He was severely wounded in the thigh in the battle of Cold Harbor, and was wounded in the leg and back while in front of Petersburg. He was in the following engagements: in 1861, July 21, Bull Run; in 1862, May 7, West Point, last of May, Mechanicsville, June 27, Gaines' Hill, June 28, Golding Farm, June 30, Charles City Cross Roads, Aug. 27, 2d Bull Run, Sept. 14, Crampton's Pass, Sept. 17, Antietam—under fire eighteen hours—Dec. 12 and 13, Fredericksburgh; in 1863, the first days of May, Chancellorsville, July 2 and 3, Gettysburgh, Nov. 7, Crossing of the Rappahannock, Nov. 27, Orange Grove; in 1864, from May 5 to May 12 inclusive, in the battles of the Wilderness, that near Spottsylvania Court House, and the charges on the fortifications near the Court House, June 1 at Cold Harbor, Sept. 19 at Winchester, Sept. 22 at Fisher's Hill, Oct. 19 at Cedar Creek; and in 1865, April 2, in the battle in front of Petersburg.

• Fox George Henry, Com. G, 10th Me.,
Capt. Jonathan Blake, was mustered into the service Sept. 9, 1862, for three years, was transferred to Com. B, 29th Me., and died.*

Fox James L., Com. K, 23d Me.,
Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months, and discharged July 15, 1863.

Fox Jonathan, 2d, Com. G, 13th Me.,
Capt. Amos G. Goodwin, was mustered into the service Dec. 31, 1861, for three years, and discharged for disability July 17, 1863.

Fox Lorenzo D., Com. D, 5th Me.,
Capt. Edward W. Thompson, was mustered into the service June 24, 1861, for three years. He was appointed Sergeant, and was mustered out July 27, 1864. He was in the following battles: in 1861, July 21, Bull Run; in 1862, May 7, West Point, last of May, Mechanicsville, June 27, Gaines' Hill, June 28, Golding Farm, June 30, Charles City Cross Roads, Aug. 27, 2d Bull Run, Sept. 14, Crampton's Pass, Sept. 17, Antietam—under fire eighteen hours—Dec. 12 and 13, Fredericksburgh; in 1863, the first days of May, Chancellorsville, July 2 and 3, Gettysburgh, Nov. 7, Crossing of the Rappahannock, Nov. 27, Orange Grove; in 1864, from May 5 to May 12 inclusive, the battles of the Wilderness, that near Spottsylvania Court House and the charges on the fortifications near the Court House, and June 1, Cold Harbor.

Fox William W., Com. G, 10th Me.,

Capt. Jonathan Blake, was mustered into the service August 18, 1862, for two years, and died.*

John Fox who settled in Porter in 1801, was a Revolutionary soldier. His brother Edward was one of our volunteers in the war of 1812. Ephraim Fox, a son of Edward, also volunteered in the war of 1812. Edward Fox, a son of Ephraim, was in the Mexican war, and died in Mexico. Daniel J. and David M. Fox, whose war record is given above, were the only remaining sons of Ephraim. George Henry, James L., Jonathan 2d, Lorenzo D., and William W. Fox were the only surviving sons of the late Richard Fox, who was a brother of Ephraim.

French Charles, Com. B, 2d Regt. Mass. Vols.,

Capt. Greeley S. Curtis, Col. George H. Gordon, enlisted May 11, 1861, for three years. He was under Gen. Banks in the Shenandoah Valley at the time of his retreat from Winchester, and under Gen. Pope during his disastrous retreat from Centerville, where our losses were numbered by tens of thousands. He was in the battles of Cedar Mountain, South Mountain, Antietam, and Chancellorsville, where he was taken prisoner May 3, 1863. Being sent to Richmond, he was put in Libby prison. He remained there but one week, when he was exchanged. Fortunate, indeed, it was for him that he was so soon liberated. He says that in the room where he was confined there were four hundred and twenty-five prisoners, and it was with much difficulty that they could lie down at all, or obtain any rest, upon a floor that might be said, without much exaggeration, to be literally covered with vermin. While he was in prison he was not aware that any prisoners were shot for merely looking out of the windows, but he was told by the prisoners that such cruelty had not been uncommon, and the bullet holes through and around the windows, confirmed the truth of their statement. The prisoners were permitted to have two meals a day, if such allowances in quantity and quality can be called meals. The name of this prison originated from that of the owner. A rebel by the name of Libby built and used it as a tobacco warehouse. Into this receptacle of filth and vermin our soldiers were thrust, we might almost say in truth, heaped, so great were their numbers for the space allotted them. It is elsewhere asserted with reference to Pennsylvania soldiers that only one in six who entered this prison left it alive. Taking into account the extent to which our soldiers were deprived, not only of food, but even of air and space for their bodies, the assertion does not seem incredible. This building was not enclosed by a wall or ditch, but a strong guard of rebel soldiers, with their loaded rifles, prevented any escape, except with the greatest risk.

After Mr. French was exchanged he joined his regiment in Tennessee, and was under Gen. Sherman until the expiration of his term of service, when he was sent to Boston and discharged June 10, 1864.

French Daniel D., Com. G, 13th Me.,

Capt. Joshua L. Sawyer, was mustered into the service Dec. 31, 1861, for three years, was ordered to Ship Island, joined Gen. Banks' Red River expedition, and like many of his comrades who were exposed to the malaria of the Mississippi swamps was compelled to be under the orders of a surgeon in the hospital rather than the commands of his captain on the tented field. For a considerable time his condition remained unimproved, but at length having regained his health, he was ordered to Washington, and thence to the Shenandoah Valley. On the march from Washington he and others from different companies, numbering in all one hundred, were detailed to guard a provision train on its way to Winchester. While passing through an obscure region of the country they were suddenly assailed by Mosby's Guerillas, and one-half of their number slain, the rest barely escaping by flight. He was discharged Jan. 6, 1865.

French Lorenzo D., Com. G, 3d N. H. Vols.,
Capt. Emmons, was mustered into the service July 25, 1861, for three years, and discharged for disability Aug. 29, 1862.

French Randall, Com. A, 11th Me.,
Capt. W. S. Pennell, was mustered into the service Nov. 7, 1861, for three years, and died.*

French William H., Com. G, 13th Me.,
Capt. Joshua L. Sawyer, was mustered into the service Dec. 31, 1861, for three years, re-enlisted for three years, was mustered into the same company Feb. 29, 1864, Capt. Amos G. Goodwin, was appointed corporal by Capt. Sawyer, was taken prisoner at Pleasant Hill, La., April 9, 1864, carried to Camp Ford, near Tyler, Texas, and remained there a prisoner until exchanged May 27, 1865. He was in Banks' Red River campaign, in the battles of Mansfield and Pleasant Hill, La., and was discharged Aug. 10, 1865.

Garland William H., Com. K, 23d Me.,
Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months, and mustered out July 15, 1863.

Gentleman Joseph O., Com. A, 11th Me.,
Capt. W. S. Pennell, was mustered into the service Nov. 7, 1861, for three years, was discharged for disability, but afterward re-enlisted into Com. K, 23d Me., for nine months, Capt. M. N. Stanley, then into Com. G, 93d N. Y. State National Guards, for 100 days, and lastly into Com. C, 194th N. Y. Vols. for three years. He was 1st Sergeant in Com.

A, 11th Me., 2d and 1st Lieut. in Com. K, 23d Me., Capt. of Com. G, 93d N. Y., and of Com. C, 194th N. Y. He was in the battles of Williamsburg and Fair Oaks, and was discharged April 15, 1865.

Gibbs Elias R., Com. K, 18th Penn. Cavalry, enlisted in Sept., 1862, at the same time his cousin Samuel N. Gibbs enlisted, was mustered into the same company, fought in the same battles, was taken prisoner at the same time and sent to Andersonville prison, Ga., where he died.*

Gibbs Samuel N., Com. K, 18th Penn. Cavalry, enlisted in Sept, 1862. He wrote quite often to his parents, and to the information contained in his letters we are indebted for what is here stated. By these letters we learn that he arrived at the front Feb. 10, 1863. From that time up to the succeeding July his regiment was often employed in skirmishing and making reconnoissances, but when it was found that Lee was actually en route for the north, more important duties were required of them than heretofore. In August he wrote from Warrenton Junction that the Cavalry with which he served, took in the previous month 1800 prisoners, with a large number of horses and wagons, and in eleven days lost 600 men; that he and Elias Gibbs fought in all the many battles in which their regiment was engaged, and that with the exception of his own slight wound, they remained uninjured. So far he had been shielded from the more dread realities of war, but soon from his own pen came the unwelcome message that he was in Libby prison. Next, but after months of anxious doubt, the sad, though not unexpected tidings reached his friends that the merciless foe had finished, in his case, their intended work.*

It was reported at the time in a Pennsylvania periodical that of twenty-four prisoners taken from the 18th Penn. Cavalry and put in Libby prison, four only, left there alive.

Kimball William,
was mustered into a New Hampshire regiment.

Lewis George W., Com. B, 29th Me.,
Capt. Benjamin M. Redlon, was mustered into the service Jan. 12, 1864, for three years, was sick at Augusta, Me., for several months, joined his regiment at Alexandria, La., but being again disabled by sickness, was discharged in June, 1865.

Libby Randall, 2d, Com. A, 11th Me., enlisted for three years Sept. 26, 1861, was mustered into the service Nov. 7, 1861, and appointed 2d Lieutenant. May 11, 1862, while at the front, he was commissioned Captain. He commanded Company A at the battle of Williamsburgh, at Bottom's Bridge, at Fair Oaks and Seven Pines, participated in other severe engagements while advancing toward and crossing the Chickahominy, and in the seven days' constant fighting, from June 26th to July 2d inclusive, during McClellan's retreat from the Chickahominy to Harrison's Landing. Gen. Nagley, in an address to his brigade, to which the 11th Maine belonged, said: "Thus is yours the honor of having been the first to pass and the last to leave the Chickahominy, and while you led the advance from this memorable place near Richmond, you were the last in the retreating column, when after seven days' constant fighting it reached a place of security and rest at Harrison's Landing." Subsequently the regiment proceeded to Yorktown. Here the climate and severe labor induced the disease which terminated his life. He was discharged for disability March 24, 1863, and died.*

Lord John, Com. K, 23d Me.,
Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months, was appointed Sergeant, and discharged July 15, 1863.

McDonald Samuel, Com. K, 23d Me.,
Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months, was appointed Corporal, and discharged July 15, 1863.

Moulton John, jr., Com. D, 2d Minn. Vols., enlisted June 17, 1861. July 5 of the same year he was appointed Sergeant, and in December following 1st Sergeant. In 1862, Jan. 1, he was commissioned 2d Lieut., May 1, 1st Lieut., and Oct. 27, Captain of the same company. In 1864, July 15, he was commissioned Major of his regiment, and in 1865, March 13, brevet Lieut. Colonel. In 1862, Jan. 19, he was in the battle of Mill Spring, Ky., during the month of May at the siege of Corinth, Miss., and Oct. 8 at the battle of Perryville, Ky.; in 1863, Sept. 19 and 20, at Chickamauga, Tenn., Nov. 25 at Mission Ridge, Tenn.; in 1864, first of May, at Buzzard Roost Gap and Tunnell Hill, Ga., May 15 at Resaca, Ga., June 27 at Kenesaw Mountain, Ga., Sept. 1 at Jonesborough, Ga.; and in 1865, March 19, at Bentonville, N. C. His department commanders were Gens. Buell, Rosecrans, Thomas, Grant, and Sherman. He was with the last named in his victorious march from Chattanooga through Georgia and the Carolinas, and was mustered out of the service July 11, 1865. He neither asked for nor received a furlough, but performed his duty as a soldier every day during the entire period of his enlistment.

Ridlon William, Com. H, 27th Me.,
Capt. Henry F. Snow, was mustered into the service Sept. 30, 1862, for nine months, and was mustered out July 17, 1863. A portion of his regiment, however, was mustered out in June, at the expiration of their nine months' service. At this time Gen. Lee was rapidly advancing toward Pennsylvania, and throughout the country the greatest anxiety was felt not only for Washington, Philadelphia, and other northern cities, but even for the Republic itself. At this juncture the President and Secretary of war appealed to the men of those regiments whose terms of service were about expiring, to remain and aid their brothers in arms to stay and drive back these minions of slavery with their perjured leader. So far as three hundred and fifteen men of the 27th were concerned, the appeal was not in vain. That number, and Porter had her representative among them, remained until the battle of Gettysburgh had been fought, and Lee driven from the soil of Pennsylvania. The almost certainty of a desperate and deadly encounter in the near future, was theirs to consider, yet these patriot heroes did not quail in view of such a prospect. These were mustered out July 17, 1863, the remainder of the regiment having left for their homes in June.

Robbins Frank, Com. K, 23d Me.,
Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months, and died.*

Stanley Moses N.,

was commissioned Captain of Com. K, 23d Me., was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, and was mustered out July 15, 1863. He re-enlisted and was mustered into Com. B, 29th Me., Jan. 12, 1864, was commissioned and mustered into Com. C, 29th Me., as 1st Lieut., Jan. 15, 1864, and discharged for disability Oct. 25, 1864.

Stanley Samuel 2d, Com. K, 23d Me.,

Capt. M. N. Stanley, was mustered into the service Sept. 29, 1862, for nine months. He was appointed Corporal and afterward Sergeant of his company. He was discharged July 15, 1863.

Stanley William S., Com. G, 10th Me.,

Capt. Jonathan Blake, was mustered into the service Aug. 25, 1862, for three years, was transferred to Bat. 10th Me., and from 10th Bat. to Com. C, 29th Me., was in the battles of Antietam and South Mountain, Md., Chancellorsville, Va., and Gettysburgh, Penn. He was discharged in June, 1865.

Stewart Samuel, Com. B, 1st Regt. Me. Cavalry,

Capt. Jacob B. Loring, was mustered into the service Dec. 23, 1863. His company was mustered out Aug. 1, 1865.

Storer John, Com. F, 8th Me.,

Capt. Albert R. Willis, was mustered into the service Sept. 24, 1864, and discharged in 1865.

Tibbetts Henry C., Com. H, 2d Regt. Minn. Vols.,

Nelson W. Dickinson, Com. Commander, was mustered into the service July 15, 1861, was discharged, re-enlisted into the same company Dec. 20, 1863, for three years, John R. Beatty, Com. Commander, was in the battles of Mill Spring, Ky., Chickamauga, Tenn., Perryville, Ky., and Mission Ridge, Tenn., was under Gen. Sherman in his march from Chattanooga, through Georgia and the Carolinas, and was mustered out of the service July 25, 1865.

Towle Ezra, Com. G, 10th Me.,

Capt. Jonathan Blake, was mustered into the service Aug. 18, 1862, for two years, and was at the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862, where he was mortally wounded. He died.*

Towle Nelson, Com. E, 9th Me.,

Capt. Edwin W. Wedgwood, was mustered into the service Sept. 22, 1861, for three years, re-enlisted, and Jan. 1, 1864, was mustered into the same company for three years, Capt. Josiah C. Beal. He was appointed Sergeant Sept. 22, 1861, and Orderly Sergeant in June, 1862. In 1861, Nov. 7, he was in the battle at Hilton Head, S. C.; in 1862, March 4,
